THAT TIME FORGOT INC.

An illustration of an elephant's head and trunk, holding a banner that says "INC." The elephant is facing right, and its trunk is curled over the banner. The banner is part of a larger graphic that includes the words "THE TRAVELING CIRCUS" and "THAT TIME FORGOT INC." in a stylized, outlined font.

Isn't it fun at the circus? The show will start any minute, but while you're waiting, here are some games for you to play.

Connect the dots from one to one hundred and three. Someone familiar you will see. He's the one who says "Let the show begin!" When you get home, you can color him in.

Wouldn't you like to explore the circus lot? Now you can! If you unfold your funbook, you'll find a map of the circus. Here's a fun way to play with the map: Ask Mom or Dad for a penny. Put the penny in the performance ring and pretend it's you. (It will look even more like you if you put the penny head side up.)

Following the paths around the circus lot, walk your penny from the performance ring to the prop tent. On your way, why not stop at the concession stand for a chocolate-covered banana? They really are yummy, and they cost only $2.25. I bet Mom and Dad would like one too.

Now go to Clown Alley. This is where you would live if you were a clown. Maybe someday you'll grow up to be a clown, but for now it's easy to pretend with the Happy Face Clown Makeup Kit, ten fantastic makeup items at one low price. It's yours for $4.50 at any one of the many Toy 'n' Treat stands around the lot.

The Toy 'n' Treat stands also have a cute little monkey-on-a-stick who looks just like our gorilla, Mahler. A real gorilla costs thousands of dollars, but you can have a monkey-on-a-stick for just $3.75. Can you and your new toy monkey find Mahler's cage?

While you're at the menagerie, don't forget to buy some peanuts for old Hannibal. Since you're not allowed to feed the animals, you'll have to eat them yourself! You'll find them a delicious treat, and at 90¢, they're a real bargain. Why not get two bags?

Now walk your penny back to the performance ring. The show is about to begin!

Don't you love birthdays? Chuckles the Clown does! And Chuckles invites you to have your next birthday party at the circus! Here's how it works:

Just tell Mom that you'd like to have your birthday party at The Traveling Circus That Time Forgot, Inc. She can buy tickets at a special discount price for you and all your friends* and Chuckles himself will wish you a happy birthday during the show. You even get a free balloon! Doesn't that sound like fun?

If the circus won't be in town during your birthday, why not plan an early party? Chuckles wants to help YOU celebrate!

*25¢ off the regular ticket price. Minimum 12 tickets per party. Visit the ticket booth to make arrangements.
